

Introduction

Over centuries, education methodologies evolved to meet the humanity needs to develop and disseminate essential knowledge to new generations. Education evolution was affected by many factors including economy, urbanization, specialization, globalization, technology, and others. Methods advanced from direct instructions, kinesthetic practices, differentiated instruction, flipped classroom, expeditionary discovery, to inquiry-based learning. Modern education methodologies are becoming the new standard for education in many subjects such as history, science, mathematics, technology, and language. Foreign language subject seems to be lagging on the progression curve because of many factors including lacking suitable standardized curriculums for English speakers, scarcity of qualified teachers, scattered small size populations interested in specific foreign languages, and absence of modern education framework that meets the current school system requirements. Our organization is tackling the challenge of improving the modern education for foreign language.
